FIRE DESTROYS SEVEN BUILDINGS IN NEW OXFORD

One Structure after Another Falls as Fierce Conflagration Sweeps through the Town. Three Horses Burned. Heavy Damage.

MARTIN'S MILL IS BURNED

Sweeping with relentless fury down both sides of an alley in the southern portion of New Oxford, fire, which was discovered shortly after one o'clock this morning, completely destroyed seven buildings together with practically all their contents, including three horses, a quantity of furniture, numerous wagons, harness, grain and feed. The entire town was showered with sparks from the blaze and buildings in many other sections caught but were saved by prompt action. Those suffering losses were:

Wallace Hershey, baker, used the stable of Horner Eckert for his horses and wagons. Lost three horses, one bread wagon, two sleighs, all the harness, a large quantity of feed, two tons of hay. He carried no insurance and his loss is total.

Albert Gulden, two stables, one buggy, and a quantity of feed.

T. S. Swamley, stable used as a broom manufacturing plant. Broom making machine destroyed together with supply of broom corn.

William Miller's stable used by Roy Baker in his butchering business. Saved horses, wagons and harness but lost a quantity of feed.

Mrs. Sarah Warner's stable and shed containing many of the belongings of her brother, Theodore Warner.

Citizens were Asleep

The residents of the town were fast asleep when the fire was first discovered by Mrs. Curtis Leib, who lives close by the Eckert property where the blaze originated from an unknown cause. When she first saw it, flames were shooting up from various portions of the building and the men who first arrived at the scene found it impossible to get out the three fine horses which Mr. Hershey used in delivering bread to his customers. The horses were beyond saving, even if the flames had not driven the men back, and the wagons and other contents were already burned.

Jumping from the Eckert stable to that of Albert Gulden the blaze soon had this structure doomed and another stable immediately adjoining and also the property of Mr. Gulden fell prey to the rapidly advancing flames. Only a bucket brigade was now fighting the furious fire which was leaping rapidly from one building to another, the heat driving back the fighters as it advanced. The firemen got out as quickly as possible and, once on the scene, rendered invaluable service in extinguishing the conflagration which, however, was not under control for a half hour or more after they reached the place.

Broom Corn Adds Fuel

From the Gulden stables the flames next attacked the building of T. S. Swamley. The stable was a frame structure, as were all the others, and in a few minutes it was a blazing mass of lumber. The dry broom corn which Mr. Swamley had on hand for his business added fuel to the flames which shot high into the air, throwing up shower after shower of sparks. One of the broom manufacturing machines was totally destroyed.

William Miller's stable fell next. Early arrivals saw that this building lay right in the path of the fast consuming fire and succeeded in getting to a place of safety the horses and wagons together with some of the harness used by Roy Baker in his meat business. The feed was destroyed. A new slaughter house almost immediately adjoined the Miller stable but it is, fortunately, of brick construction with slate roof and the only damage done to it was the burning of the window sills.

Furniture Burned

Mrs. Sarah Warner's stable caught from the Miller building and in less than ten minutes was a smoldering mass of ruins. Theodore Warner had many of his personal effects, including a collection of furniture, stored in this building, and they simply added fuel to the flames.

By this time the firemen had gotten to work in earnest with efficient hose lines and they were able to conquer the blaze and prevent any further loss. Among the buildings which caught fire during the progress of the conflagration was the residence of ex-Sheriff F. M. Miller, two blocks distant. The roof caught but quick action saved it. A. E. Buckner's stable, about 300 yards from the last building burned, also caught fire but was saved. Sparks fell all over the town and there were many anxious minutes for the citizens of the place until things were finally under control.

Some Had Insurance

Few of the owners and renters of the buildings had insurance on the contents but all had some insurance on the buildings themselves. Most of this was carried in either the Mummasburg or Adams County companies.

The heaviest loser is Mr. Hershey who lost the three horses, vehicles, harness and feed. He did not have a cent of insurance on the entire outfit and his loss is total. The Miller barn was the only other one in which horses were kept and there was time to get them to a place of safety.

Coming as it did so soon after the blaze at the Livingston business block last Saturday night the fire was especially terrifying to the residents of New Oxford, all of whom turned out, either to help, to protect their own properties or to watch the blaze. The flames shot far into the sky and the reflection caused by the fire could be seen for many miles.

It is stated to-day that the majority of the owners, if not all of them, will rebuild.

SENATOR MARTIN'S MILL DESTROYED

The stave mill of Hon. William A. Martin, at Boyds, in Menallen township, was totally destroyed by fire shortly after one o'clock this morning together with a quantity of staves entailing a loss of about $2500.

It is supposed that the blaze was caused by the engine, and the first ignition of the fire was gleaned when William J. Stover, tenant on the Martin farm, was awakened by the noise of the exhaust, the engine having become overheated from the burning mill.

So rapidly did the wood burn that it was impossible for Mr. Stover and his family to save much of the contents. Some lumber, however, was not burned but about 2000 finished staves were consumed together with all the contents of the building.

The mill was erected about three years ago and had been conducted successfully since that time, Harry Martin, of Arendtsville, having charge of it lately. Most of the product was sold to the Reading Iron and Steel Company, with general offices at Lebanon.

LOCAL PEOPLE AT CHURCH MEETINGS

Lutherans Gather at Pen Mar while Members of Reformed Church Visit Hoffman Orphanage. Many go from Gettysburg.

A general exodus from town took place this morning when the Lutherans and Reformed went forth to gatherings at Pen Mar and the Hoffman Orphanage.

The crowd at the mountain resort was expected to be in the neighborhood of 15,000 and the trains going through Gettysburg carried hundreds of Lutherans for the big annual reunion. The usual program of education and entertainment was provided for all, local interest centering in the address of Rev. Joseph B. Baker, of St. James Lutheran church whose subject was "Young Lutherans at Work."

Some of those going from here attended the session while others devoted themselves to enjoying the attractions of the mountain. Among those who went from Gettysburg were:

Mr. and Mrs. J. O. G. Weaver, Miss Laura Blocher, Miss Mary Kohler, Miss Caroline Bream, Miss Margaret Bream, Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Dull, Miss Maude Miller, Miss Hattie Ziegler, Rev. George N. Lauffer, Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Miller, Rev. Edmund Manges, Robert D. Bream, William Abell, Charles H. Wilson, Miss Alice Martin, Mrs. C. B. Gettysburg annually takes increasing interest in the anniversary exercises at the Hoffman Orphanage near Two Taverns and this year automobiles and carriages took many members of the Reformed church to that institution where an attractive program of exercises had been arranged. The principal feature of the day was the address by Judge T. J. C. Williams, of the Juvenile Court, Baltimore.

Judge Williams has before him thousands of cases each year. His experience, interest in delinquent and needy children, and his eloquence, makes him an intensely interesting speaker on his subject. The children rendered songs, recitations, pantomime and drills.

BASE BALL TEAM TAKES ANOTHER

Salad Birds of Carlisle again Fall before Gettysburg's Ball Players. Dutch Weimer Responsible for the Victory.

Little credit can be given the locals for their second defeat administered to the Salad Birds of Carlisle on Nixon Field when the Cumberland County players were taken across 4 to 3.

An amateurish exhibition early in the game well nigh disgusted the loyal supporters and it looked as though they were due for a repetition of the school boy playing which at times featured the game with York. Only the timely arrival of "Dutch" Weimer, who took care of center field in the absence of McDonnell saved the game and to him, rather than to the regulars, is due the credit for the victory. His hits were responsible for two runs. Plank and Oyer were the only other Gettysburgians to hit safely.

Bradshaw was on the mound for Gettysburg and struck out eight. Hart pitched for Carlisle passing four men, allowing six hits and striking out twelve.

Carlisle scored a run in the first after two were out. Herman reached base on Plank's error. He started to steal second. Skelly threw to center field, Herman proceeded to third from where he scored when Oyer failed to stop Weimer's throw-in.

Carlisle scored again in the second. Hart reached third on his smash to left. Skelly threw past Oyer and Hart scored. The visitors got another in the fourth. Adams hit a two bagger to center, Hart sent another of the same value to center, Adams scoring. "Lefty" Bradshaw tightened up after the fourth and Carlisle never scored again.

Gettysburg scored its first run in the second. Norman Starry reached first base when the catcher dropped the third strike. Plank bunted and Starry was out at second. Weimer then hit to the right field swamp for three bases, Plank scoring.

Gettysburg did not score again until the sixth. Bream walked and advanced to second on Starry's out. Bream scored from second on Plank's hit to short. "Dutch" Weimer reminded Hart that he was still in the game by scrapping out a double, Plank scoring. Oyer then singled through short and Weimer scored. These three runs finished the scoring.

Features of the game were Weimer's hitting, Starry's catch in the ninth, and Bream's catch in the first.

PRETTY WEDDING IN THE VALLEY

Returns to Home of her Father's Relatives to be Married. St. Ignatius Church Scene of Early Morning Wedding.

St. Ignatius' church in Buchanan Valley was the scene of a very pretty wedding, Wednesday morning at half past nine, when Miss Margaret Mary Young, of Arlington, Ill., was married to Edward James O'Brien, son of Mr. and Mrs. Levi O'Brien, of Gettysburg. Rev. W. A. Howard conducted the ceremony.

The bride is a daughter of Michael Young, of Arlington, Ill., who was a wealthy merchant and kept a general store for fifty years in that city. Both of her parents are dead, and she is acting as executrix of the estate. She came east to be married in the presence of her husband's parents, children and friends.

The bridal party entered the church as the Mendelssohn wedding march was played by the organist, Miss Virginia Irvin, accompanied on the violin by Master George Thomas O'Brien, of Arlington, nephew of the bridegroom.

The bridesmaid, Miss Sue G. O'Brien, entered with her brother, the bridegroom. The matron of honor, Mrs. Charles O'Brien was with Edgar F. Kimple the best man and the ring bearer, Master Raymond F. Oyer, and flower girls immediately preceded the bride who was unattended.

The bride's gown was of charmeuse with shadow lace, and chiffon rose trimming made en train with cap veil held in place by lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet of brides roses and lilies of the valley.

The bridesmaid was gowned in pink crepe meteor with shadow lace, wore a picture hat, and carried a bouquet of pink roses and sweet peas.

Mrs. O'Brien, sister-in-law of the bridegroom, and special friend of the bride, was matron of honor, and wore blue crepe de chine, with shadow lace and picture hat, and carried a bouquet of Lillian Russell roses.

The ring bearer, carried the ring on a cut glass tray. He was dressed in white. The two little flower girls were both pieces of the groom. Pauline Oyer, of Biglerville, was dressed in blue silk with shadow lace and lace cap to match and carried basket filled with sweet peas and sweet alyssum. Marie Louise O'Brien, Arlington, was dressed in pink silk with shadow lace cap to match.

The ushers were John O'Brien, brother of the bridegroom; Ernest Miller, Harry Oyer, Merl Miller and Francis Kimple.

The altars were beautifully decorated with native ferns, daisies, golden rod and red and white carnations. The bridal party will take an extensive trip through the eastern cities, Philadelphia, Atlantic City, New York, Niagara Falls, through Canada to Detroit, Michigan, and to Chicago, Ill.

The presents were numerous, handsome and valuable. Their many friends wish them much happiness on their voyage through life. S. C. S.

SHOOTS WOMAN; CUTS THROAT

Farmhand Tries Suicide When Posse Surrounds Him.

HIS VICTIM WILL RECOVER

He Attempted to Kill a Farmer's Wife and Later Fired Two Bullets Into His Head and Cuts Throat.

Coatesville, Pa., July 23.—Angered by his discharge after three years of service, "Happy" Dooley, a farm hand, forty years old, shot Mrs. Roy Martin, the wife of his employer, on his farm near here, in an effort to "get even."

Five hours later, when overtaken and surrounded in a strip of forest in the Black Horse hills, three miles from the Martin home, he shot himself twice in the head and then cut his throat with a pocketknife. He is said to be dying in the Coatesville hospital.

The attack upon Mrs. Martin, who is twenty-eight years old, was made while her husband was absent and she was alone on the farm.

Dooley blamed Mrs. Martin for his dismissal and told Martin when he left the farm on Tuesday that he would be revenged. The woman had gone to a potato patch near the house, and was bending over the plants when she heard a step behind her. Turning, she saw Dooley with a revolver in his hand, smiling ironically at her.

Mrs. Martin sprang toward Dooley, who, she said, leveled the weapon at her and fired. The bullet struck her in the cheek, knocking out her teeth. She grasped the man by the arm and struggled for the weapon. In the tussle the weapon was again discharged by Dooley, and the bullet ploughed through Mrs. Martin's hand.

She continued to hold the weapon until, weak from the loss of blood, she fainted and fell to the ground. Dooley is said to have fired another shot at her as she lay prostrate, but the bullet missed its mark. He then reloaded and ran into a strip of woods.

Several farm hands in a field near by heard the shots. They carried Mrs. Martin into her home and flashed the light of the shooting to Coatesville and Downingtown and to be on the watch for Dooley.

Word of the attack made upon Mrs. Martin spread through the country side rapidly. Posse were formed in Coatesville and in Downingtown. Assured that his wife would not die, Martin took a shotgun and joined the searchers for Dooley.

The fugitive made his way northward, carefully avoiding farm houses and keeping to strips of woods wherever possible. He was seen by several persons as he was slinking through a patch of woods, and the posse from Coatesville was notified.

In this body were W. L. Jones, the sheriff of Coatesville; Chief of Police Gray, of Downingtown, and Police-men Branson and Tucker. Racing over the country roads in a motor car, they came upon the man near the Black Horse hills.

As he heard the sound of the approaching car, Dooley turned. A swift glance showed him that the occupants were pursuing him. Without waiting for an attack, he leveled his revolver at the car and fired twice. Then, leaping a worm fence, he ran to a strip of woods.

The small forest in which Dooley had secreted himself is about a quarter of a mile long. Separating the members of the posse went at points where they surveyed the entire circumference of the woods, and then at a signal began working their way toward the center.

As they were cautiously advancing they heard two shots from a thicket in the center of the trees. Hurrying their steps, they came upon Dooley lying on the ground, with two bullet wounds in his head. Beside him was a large pocket knife, and his throat was cut.

Dooley was unconscious and he was at once rushed to the hospital in the motor car.

GIRL SHOT BY SUITOR DIES

Iva Christian Killed by Cousin Whom She Refused to Marry.

Wellsboro, Pa., July 23.—Iva Christian, fifteen years old, who was shot, it is alleged, by Arthur Simons, aged twenty-seven years, her cousin, because she would not marry him, died. Simons, who is a farm laborer, is in jail.

According to the police, Simons had threatened the girl and she left the room on a pretext and started to run. Simons, they say, ran after her and shot her through the back.

Simons then, it is charged, fired at the girl's father, but missed him and shot a neighbor, Hiram L. Hackett, and seriously wounded him when he tried to interfere.

Rocks Crush Two to Death.

Pottsville, Pa., July 23.—While at work in a shaft of the Short Mountain colliery at Lykens, Angelo Martin and Thomas Harding were killed and Joseph Peterson was injured when a quantity of rock fell upon them. Peterson was released from the rock with great difficulty, was hurried to the station and placed upon a train and brought to the Pottsville hospital. His injuries are too severe to enable him to explain the accident.

CLARENCE KRAFT.

Player Over Whom Base Ball Strike Was Ordered.

Clarence Kraft, the immediate cause of the controversy between organized base ball and the players' union, is a left-handed first baseman, and not a very good one, but the question created by his case involves the Cincinnati agreement—a series of concessions wrung from organized base ball by the players last winter. One of the chief grievances of the men was that when a player was sent out of the National league or the American league he might not be sold to the next best league, but be shipped deep down "in the sticks," as the leagues of the little towns are known. In the Cincinnati agreement the National league and the American league agreed that when a player was released from "the big time" he should be offered in regular order to all the leagues of lower classification. Putz and the fraternity assert that this bargain has been broken in the case of Kraft.

AMERICA READY FOR FINAL TESTS

Hope She Will Prove Ability to Fly Across Atlantic.

Hammondsport, N. Y., July 23.—The trans-Atlantic flying boat, America, is ready for what are hoped to be final tests for her flight across the Atlantic.

The third motor has been mounted in position in the center of the machine at the entering edge of the top plane. It will act as a tractor, while the two original engines turn screws at the rear of the planes.

Three hundred horse-power is the total power equipment of the America as she stands. No device for starting the third motor has as yet been decided upon, although it is believed that a chain and ratchet combination will be used, operative from the entrance to the cockpit.

The trailing edges of the main planes, which were warped by water, have been recovered. The principals of the enterprise seem to be confident that the get-away from St. Johns, Newfoundland, will be made about the 10th of August.

The America is showing signs of wear and tear as a result of exposure to rough weather and of experimental work. The specially prepared wood, alderite, used in that part of the lower wings adjoining the cabin, has been cracked and broken through in several places.

The wood of the hull shows thousands of punctures made by nails in fitting on various hydroplaning devices, and the silk-covered wings have rotted considerably and are covered with small patches. The linen on the hull has shrunk from contact with water, and has grown out several rows of the nails by which it was attached to the hull and the wings. It will be necessary to give the America a thorough overhauling before the flight is attempted.

KING'S SPEECH WAS PREMIER'S

Asquith Takes Responsibility For His Wording.

CONFEREES MEET AGAIN

Round Table Conference on Home Rule Has Aroused Public Interest and Huge Crowds Greet Participants.

London, July 23.—Premier Asquith assumed in the house of commons full responsibility for the speech made by the king to the political leaders who had met at Buckingham Palace to confer on the Irish home rule problem.

The premier thus set at rest various reports in circulation since the Ulster controversy has become acute and since the first announcement of the conference. The premier said: "The speech was sent to me in an ordinary way by his majesty the day before it was delivered and I take the entire responsibility for it."

"The king left it to the discretion of the conference to determine whether or not his speech should be published and the conference decided unanimously in favor of its publication. His majesty throughout this matter has followed the strictest constitutional practice. He has not taken any step from the beginning until now except in consultation with and on the advice of his ministers."

Premier Asquith, on being questioned as to the calling of the conference, said with emphasis that all attending the conference did so unconditionally. He declined to discuss why it was being held in Buckingham Palace instead of in the house of commons.

Public interest in the crisis over the Irish home rule question over-shadowed everything else in the British Isles. When the representatives of the Liberals, Conservatives, Irish Nationalists and Ulster Unionists arrived at Buckingham Palace to continue their conference they found an enormous crowd assembled in the great open space before the gates of the palace. The various statesmen as they passed in were respectfully greeted by their sympathizers. The conference remained in session an hour and a half.

Openly, of course, the two sides declare that they cannot withdraw from their present positions, but it is understood that Premier Asquith is likely to submit to the conference a proposal to allow the Protestant counties of Ulster to vote together on the question of exclusion from the home rule parliament and that he may also go so far as to change the time limit of six years embodied in the amending bill.

It is no exaggeration to say that the first impression produced by the king's speech when the text became known in the lobbies of parliament was one of astonishment bordering on stupefaction. A good many Unionists view with disfavor the new departure, that has at least some appearance of transferring the settlement of a political question from parliament to Buckingham Palace.

ACCUSE POLICE AS ROBBERS

Warrants Are Issued For Half of the Town's Force.

Rockville Center, N. Y., July 23.—One-half of Rockville Center's police force of six men are accused of burglary by warrants issued here.

Two of the three men, Patrolmen Amos Veritizan and Henry Wickes, were arrested while on post; the third, Randolph Peterson, on his vacation, is believed to be in Holyoke, Mass. The Holyoke police have been requested by wire to apprehend him.

Three trunks containing articles of every description, valued at approximately $5000, were found at dawn in the chicken coop of Veritizan and Wickes. The village trustees are trying to induce the prisoners to explain how the trunks happened to be there.

SHOT POLICEMAN DEAD

Burlington Man Said to Have Aimed at Wife After Quarrel.

Burlington, N. J., July 23.—Thomas Rogan, a policeman, was shot and instantly killed by a bullet from a revolver fired by Winfield Templeton.

Whether the shooting was intentional or accidental has not been ascertained. Two stories are current. One is that Templeton fired at Rogan, mistaking him for a burglar.

The other is that Templeton, following a quarrel with his wife, fired at her, but missed, the bullet striking the policeman. Rogan was 150 feet distant.

Gives Title to Son's Fiancee.

Berlin, July 23.—The title of Countess of Ruppian was conferred by Emperor William upon Countess Ina Marie von Bassow-Pelvetzow, fiancee of Prince Oskar, fifth son of the Kaiser. This will be a morganatic marriage, because the bride is below royal rank.

H. H. Rogers Left $49,000,000.

New York, July 23.—Henry H. Rogers, Standard Oil millionaire, left an estate of $49,000,000 in New York state, and D. Ogden Mills left $36,526,791, according to official appraisals filed here. The net value of the Rogers estate is appraised at $40,896,999; that of the Mills estate at $35,723,925.

ROOSEVELT ASKS SENATE HEARING

Seeks to Tell Story of Panama Canal Deal.

Washington, July 23.—Colonel Roosevelt wants to be heard in opposition to the pending treaty proposing to pay Colombia $25,000,000 for the partition of Panama.

He so addressed a letter to the senate foreign relations committee. No action was taken on the ex-president's request to be heard, due to the absence of a quorum.

Colonel Roosevelt wrote Chairman Stone that he wanted to tell why he opposes paying $25,000,000 to Colombia for the partition of Panama. Reply has been made.

The Missouri senator said he had not set a date for a meeting of the committee, but that he would try to get the members together very soon.

Senator Stone indicated that he personally was not in favor of hearings.

"The question to be considered by this committee," said Senator Stone, "is not so much what happened in Colombia ten or eleven years ago. The subject for us to consider is how to adjust our relations."

"Colonel Roosevelt has said time and again what he had to say about Colombia. If he has anything further to say, as far as I am concerned, let him write it out and send it to the committee. I am not much in favor of turning the foreign relations committee of the senate into a town meeting."

Wallingford In His Prime

By GEORGE RANDOLPH CHESTER

Copyright, 1913, by the Bobbs-Merrill Co.

CHAPTER XXVII. That Little Deal.

THE woman in the next room screamed again. Blackie Daw winced in sympathy; Wallingford grinned; the gray mustache man in the corner sat in patient misery, as he had from the first, and held his swollen jaw.

"I don't think it hurts so much as it did, Jim," decided Blackie, looking up with a hopeful smile. "Stop me, I think I want to go home."

"Stay right where you are and have it out," chuckled Wallingford. "You brought me along to keep you here, and I'll do it if I have to sit on you."

The dentist, who had tried to conceal his necessarily cruel countenance with a pink mustache, hurried out to the water cooler with a glass upon which was a bright red spot, and everybody grew solemn.

"Hello, Bessmer! How's Oak Center?" the dentist greeted the stranger. "Which of you is next?" And brutal speculation kindled his eye as he looked them over.

Both the patients, anxious to put off the moment of agony, indicated each other with surprisingly ready courtesy, but Mr. Bessmer had truth and the right on his side.

"These gentlemen were waiting when I came," he insisted.

"I am only my friend's guardian," explained Wallingford with a happy smile.

"I'm it, I guess," acknowledged Blackie, cornered. "Give me another drink, Jim; quick!"

"You may come with me now," the dentist remarked softly.

Blackie arose and followed, with much careless bravado.

"Is Oak Center a pretty fair business town?" asked Wallingford of the stranger.

"For some lines," stated Bessmer, with distinct and quite visible inward reservations. "It's really a farming town and very rich, but it gives slight support to manufacturing."

"You must be a manufacturer," guessed Wallingford.

"I am in a small way," acknowledged the other, still frowning. "I have a malleable iron foundry and have obtained capacity business on a process of my own."

"Capacity is good enough."

"The trouble is with the size of the capacity," explained Bessmer, with a dry laugh. "With $50,000 more capital I could increase, not alone my net earnings, but my percentage of profit on the total investment not less than four times. As it is, I barely hold my credit."

"When a shaky business can't borrow money it sells stock," observed Wallingford with a wisdom born of much experience. "Are you incorporated?"

"Two hundred and fifty thousand. I've $125,000 worth of stock in the treasury. The $25,000 I sold of the other half went at 50 per cent."

"I suppose you'd be willing to clean out the treasury shares for your $50,000," suggested Wallingford.

The man jumped at that. "Show me how!"

"You're shamefully honest," mused Wallingford, studying him in minute detail.

"I hope so," returned Bessmer sincerely.

"I think I'll go to Oak Center and look at your plant," decided Wallingford, who had found his present location unproductive. "I have $50,000 that haven't done a useful thing, except come to me, since they were printed."

"I suppose I shall see you again, Mr. Wallingford," ventured Bessmer.

"I think so," replied Wallingford, shaking his head at him and giving a sidelong glance toward Blackie. Mr. Bessmer nodded in comprehension of the warning to be secretive. Wallingford took him by the arm and walked into the operating room with him, coolly closing the dentist out with Blackie. "I'd rather not have Mr. Daw know anything of our affairs," he explained.

"I guessed as much," smiled Bessmer, "but at first I thought he was an intimate friend of yours."

"He's an intimate business rival," denied Wallingford, chuckling. "We have some great fights."

"What is your business, if I may ask?" Bessmer naturally inquired.

"The purchase and sale of stock in unprosperous companies." J. Rufus told him, with a perfectly straight countenance.

"I guess you could do it," Bessmer opined, with a sigh. "I wish you would think it worth while to take hold of my factory."

"What time do you go back to Oak Center?"

"On the 2:40 train."

"I'll ride over with you," promised Wallingford, and they shook hands on it.

Mr. Bessmer, much relieved as to jaw and with renewed hope as to business, took a seat in the parlor car of the 2:40 train, correctly guessing that the resplendent Wallingford would ride there or nowhere. The train waited its appointed four minutes; its bell clanged; its whistle tooted; its smoke puffed, and it pulled out, and still no Wallingford!

Bessmer suddenly felt weary and old. He had not realized until now how critical his business situation really was. The proof of it lay in the fact that he had grasped so desperate ly at the word of a chance stranger. "Well, Mr. Bessmer, how's the jaw?" Inquired a cheerful voice at his elbow, and, looking up, he found Blackie Daw, laden with a suit case, a hat-box, an Oxford and a saxophone case. "Haven't any, so far as the feeling is concerned," responded Bessmer, his heart jumping with the sudden memory that Blackie Daw was in the same line of business as the man who had failed him. "I didn't notice you getting on the train."

"You were looking for Jim Wallingford; that's the reason," laughed Blackie, stowing grips in every available corner, and sitting down, like a real sport, with no regard whatever for the tails of his Prince Albert. "I side tracked him."

Mr. Bessmer contracted his brows and turned on Blackie a glance of disapproval. "That was not fair to either Mr. Wallingford or myself," he charged.

"It's all in the game," declared Blackie lightly. "I saw he had a business opportunity with you, so I had a phony telegram delivered to him and sent him on a wild goose chase; then I made your dentist tell me all about the Bessmer Malleable Process company, and here I am!"

Mr. Bessmer could not see the joke. "Mr. Wallingford might have purchased my stock," he protested.

"So might I," Blackie consoled him. "On the other hand, Mr. Wallingford might not have purchased it, and I may not. Tell me the news."

J. Rufus Wallingford paused opposite the corner of the Bessmer Malleable Process company and made a comprehensive estimate of it. It was a more or less toy plant, but radiated the impression of extreme business so thoroughly that its walls seemed to bulge and quiver.

With a nod of satisfaction Wallingford walked into the office where Mr.

"You don't mean to say you've sold it!" protested Wallingford.

Bessmer, with gray filings on his hat and in his hair and mustache and even clinging to his eyebrows, was bent over a much soiled building plan.

"I'm in no hurry, Mr. Bessmer," said Wallingford cheerily. "When you're not so busy I'll take up with you the matter of the purchase of that stock."

Mr. Bessmer seemed somewhat embarrassed. "I'm very sorry to say you're too late," he returned, his conscience smiting him that he had helped to trick this friendly big stranger out of a possibly profitable deal.

"You don't mean to say you've sold it?" protested Wallingford.

In spite of his compunctions a gleam of satisfaction lit Mr. Bessmer's eyes.

"Well," he stated apologetically, "the spot cash was offered me, and now I'm building my extensions."

"I bet I know who bought it," declared Wallingford, with a trace of annoyance.

"Your friend, Mr. Daw," admitted Bessmer, flushing slightly. "I'm afraid that he played a rather questionable trick on you and that I made myself a party to it."

"I can't blame you," pardoned Wallingford, hurt, but generous. "Does Mr. Daw now own all your surplus stock?"

"Every share of it."

"Where would I find Mr. Daw?"

Bessmer suddenly laughed. "He is probably out oiling the engine, or trimming castings at one of the emery wheels to see the sparks, or riding on the warehouse elevator. Shall I send for him?"

"No, thanks," replied Wallingford, with careful gravity. "If you don't mind my going through your factory unattended I'll hunt him up."

With a fair certainty of what he would find Wallingford walked back through the grinding shop and out the side door. Across the yard on one of the little narrow gauge tracks that ran everywhere came a black casting car, rattling and bumping at top speed, and standing on the buffers was a tall lank figure in new vivid blue overalls and blouse and wearing a workman's cap tilted rakishly up over one corner of his forehead.

"Can't stop, Jim!" he yelled as he flew past. "They're waiting for this car."

Wallingford, finding no place clean enough to sit down, stood where he was for two mortal minutes until Blackie came back with a face which, though well grimed, was perfectly happy.

"I thought you were supposed to stick around the town in a silk hat and in a spruce confidence," complained Wallingford by way of greeting.

"You know, Jim, sometimes I think you're a dub after all," reproached Blackie. "You never will get the finer points of stagecraft. I had myself made assistant manager, and I'm inspiring so much confidence that this morning I had Bessmer lock my own money up in his safe for fear I'd trust myself too far."

"Assistant manager!" chuckled Wallingford, who had the born instinct for mechanics, of which Blackie had no trace. "What do you manage principally?"

"The oil can till the engineer hid it," Blackie informed him, with regret. "He admitted that I was some sure enough oiler, but objected that the cost of the stuff came off his fuel appropriation. On the level, I'm crazy about this business! Say, do you know, the fireman went home sick last night, and I got here in time to have the safety valve popping off at 7 o'clock. I have to teach that fellow how to build a fire when he gets back. You do it like this: First you scrape all the ashes and clinkers out of the grate bars, then you put in an even layer of shavings and build a lattice work of kindling all over it, then you spread a thin layer of coal on top of that and light a cigarette and toss the match under the boiler. Why, two minutes after I blew the whistle I had the engineer in there—he gets pale when he's excited—fussing with the pump. He says I'm a coker of a fireman. But he has a cheaper man on the job now."

"I don't suppose you've thought of that list," observed Wallingford in a half hopeless tone.

"I'm so discouraged!" asserted Blackie. "I never get credit for anything. Here's your list. Stay and have lunch with us, Jim?"

"Lunch?" puzzled Wallingford. "Why, you're not over four blocks from your hotel."

"True," assented Blackie, "but am I one to assume airs of superiority over my own intelligent workmen? I treat them as fellow human beings. You see, I intend to run for mayor of my suburb on the reform ticket this fall. So I bring my lunch with me in a little tin pail every day and play them the saxophone at noon time. I've improved a lot in my music, Jim. Shall I come up and play for you tonight?"

"If you do I'll murder you," declared Wallingford. "You stay away from my hotel until we are through."

The housewife will probably examine the window curtains carefully, for here at last she will imagine the utility of rubber breaks down. But as a matter of fact the daintily designed curtains, like everything else, are of rubber, attached to rubber rings and hung on a rubber pole.

The debt of the sportsman in almost every kind of field game to the discover of rubber is a heavy one, and it will be some time before it is recognized if the effort to utilize rubber for lawn tennis courts proves successful. A specimen court has been built in the annex at Agricultural hall in order that the experts may test the rubber surface for themselves. Disasters at sea would no longer take their fearful toll of life, for rubber built ships might collide with no worse result than a cannon off the cushion.

A thousand accidents of grievous consequence in modern life would be quite trivial. Child Saved From Exposure by Warmth of Bodies of Animals.

An old black bear and her two cubs played the part of mother and playmates for Baby Ball, the two-year-old son of a farmer living near Piffelt, Wis. The little boy was found nestled close to the cubs in their brush bed, hidden in a patch of briars.

He disappeared from his home, and a country-wide search had been carried on to find him.

"The big doggies play, but Baby's hungry," was the greeting the little fellow gave the men who found him.

The child was starving, apparently, but was not suffering from exposure. It was evident to the men who found him that he had been kept alive by the warmth of the bears' bodies.

The child wandered from the home of his parents. A patch of cloth from the blue rompers he wore was found on a bush near the roadside. Investigation and a search further into the woods disclosed the bears' den and the child sleeping with two cubs.

SILENT CITY IN AGE OF RUBBER

Sir Henry Blake Sees Visions of Noiseless London.

SURE RELIEF FOR BRAIN FOG

Furniture and Wall Paper of Rubber Shown—English Writer Facetious Over Tremendous Possibilities—All That Is Required For Utopian Age Is Elasticity of Mind.

Sir Henry Blake, president of the fourth international rubber and allied industries exhibition, looks forward to a day when the streets of London will be paved with rubber and the brain fog consequent upon the incessant noise of main thoroughfares will be minimized to the advantage of hundreds of thousands of people.

When the exhibition was last held in London, three years ago, the idea might have been dismissed as utopian, but since then such striking progress has been made, both in the manufacture and the use of plantation rubber, that Sir Henry Blake's vision may well be within the range of practical politics.

The exhibition itself, which has the official support of more than forty governments, affords abundant evidence of the progress which has been made. One room—a writing room—is completely furnished in rubber. The walls are covered in rubber skillfully disguised as wall paper, the pictures are mounted in rubber frames, and the carpet is of the same all conquering material. The tables and chairs, the blotters, paper weights and letter racks, the inkstands and the penholders are of rubber, while the electric table lamps are of vulcanite.

The housewife will probably examine the window curtains carefully, for here at last she will imagine the utility of rubber breaks down. But as a matter of fact the daintily designed curtains, like everything else, are of rubber, attached to rubber rings and hung on a rubber pole.

About Municipal Ownership

Public Service for July, Editorially said: The Supreme Court of New York State nipped efforts to "slip something over" on the people of Binghamton, when it decided that bonds issued by that city for the purpose of building a municipal electric plant, were illegal and invalid. The advocates of political management of a complicated industry strangely failed to incorporate in the bond ordinance a section plainly required by law, providing for the raising annually, by tax of a sum sufficient to pay the interest and principal, as the same became due.

Quite bluntly the Court said: "By the ordinance which was presented to them for inspection and consideration the taxpayers were not informed that the burden of paying the interest on this large debt and of paying the debt itself ultimately, as it came due, was being imposed upon them. They might have been led by electioneers and interested parties to believe that they would never be asked to pay either the interest or the debt."

The absence of this provision from the ordinance lent great plausibility to such an argument. And therefore, the taxpayers were deceived and led into giving formal assent to an innocent looking proposition, whereas, in fact, they were voting a burden upon their pocketbooks and an encumbrance upon their homes.

The insertion of the provision in the subsequent ordinance which ordered the bond issue did not cure the defect; it emphasized the deception.

There Was a Political over-turning at Tacoma, Washington, recently, and three new city commissioners took office. At the first meeting three important department heads of the municipal electric plant were removed and substituted with appointees more politically agreeable to the victorious candidates. In certain respects political management does not lack snap and decision. Fitness for the particular technical duties in an electrical organization is about the last thing considered, however. Few Folks Have

Gray Hair Now

Druggist Says Ladies are Using Recipe of Sage Tea and Sulphur.

Hair that loses its color and lustre, or when it fades, turns gray, dull and lifeless, is caused by a lack of sulphur in the hair. Our grandmother made up a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur to keep her locks dark and beautiful, and thousands of women and men who value that even color, that beautiful dark shade of hair which is so attractive, use only this old-time recipe.

Nowadays we get this famous mixture by asking at any drug store for a 50 cent bottle of "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy," which darkens the hair so naturally, so evenly, that nobody can possibly tell it has been applied. Besides, it takes off dandruff, stops scalp itching and falling hair. You just dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time. By morning the gray hair disappears; but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also brings back the gloss and lustre and gives it an appearance of abundance.

CAILLAUX HURLS DUEL CHALLENGE

Husband of Prisoner Clashes With Opposing Counsel

STATE SECRETS ALARM FRANCE

Officials in Gravest Conceit, as Other Issues Are Shadowed by Political Phases.

Paris, July 23.—Politics was the predominant factor in connection with the trial of Mme. Caillaux for the murder of Gaston Calmette, editor of the Figaro.

The French government was understood to be greatly concerned in regard to the diplomatic documents mentioned at Tuesday's hearing as having been in the possession of the assassinated editor. These documents, it was stated, were later handed over to President Poincaré, who passed them on to the foreign office.

Joseph Caillaux, the prisoner's husband, and Fernand Labori, her counsel, made a vehement demand that the documents should be produced in the court.

It is understood that the premier, anticipating such a demand, left instructions with his substitute at the foreign office as to what course should be pursued with the papers, which are in the foreign office archives.

The moment after the court had come to order the procurator general rose and said:

"I am authorized by the government to declare that the documents referred to in Tuesday's testimony are only pretended copies of documents which do not exist."

The procurator general exclaimed that the honor and patriotism of M. Caillaux remained unstained. Maitre Labori objected to the language used by Maitre Chenu.

Georges Prestat, a brother-in-law of the murdered editor and chairman of the Figaro company, was then called to the stand and emphatically denied that the Figaro had been in the pay of foreign banks. The Germans, he said, had never held the majority of the shares of the Figaro, as had been alleged. He then read lengthy extracts from memoranda.

While M. Prestat was testifying M. Caillaux came from his seat among the witnesses and stood closer to the bar in order to hear better.

Maitre Shenu, commenting on M. Prestat's testimony, said: "I will add that it does not become M. Caillaux to come here and endeavor to soil the grave which his wife made."

Then followed an exciting scene. Many of those in court rose from their seats and shouted "Bravo!" while others hissed and murmured, until Judge Louis Albaladejo was obliged to call the court to order with a severe reprimand.

M. Caillaux, in a state of extreme agitation, exclaimed: "Since I must take notice of what this lawyer has said I will ask him if he will take personal responsibility for his words."

Another sensation was caused among the spectators by this exclamation and loud "Bravos!" for M. Caillaux were heard all over the court. When the noise had somewhat subsided Maitre Shenu replied:

"I take the entire responsibility. You cannot menace me here. You doubtless do not know the temper of the man whom you address."

The disorder in court was so great that Judge Albaladejo threatened to clear the chamber if the manifestation was repeated.

MARRIES WHEN SON DOES

Mother a Bride, Too, at East Orange, N. J., Double Wedding.

East Orange, N. J., July 23.—Before the same altar in the same house and by the same clergyman a mother and son were married at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William M. Ballentine, when their daughter, Miss Angie Ballentine, became the bride of Clarence M. Daily and Mrs. Maud Daily became the bride of Silas Carpenter, of Park Ridge, Ill.

Both ceremonies were performed by Rev. Dr. Charles Townsend, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of Orange. The young people were married first, with the bridegroom's mother and prospective stepfather as man of honor and best man. The older couple were then married, with the young people as attendants.

Dogs Kill 39,000 Sheep.

Harrisburg, Pa., July 23.—Stray dogs will cost Pennsylvania sheep owners at least $50,000 for the year ending Dec. 31, according to rough figures compiled by the state department of agriculture. Returns received from thirty-one counties show that in the last months ending June 31 dogs had killed 39,000 sheep, and that the counties had paid a total indemnity of $22,000. From these figures it is estimated that the loss easily will reach $50,000 this year.

GENERAL OROZCO.

He Will Lead New Revolution in Mexico.

OROZCO WILL LEAD NEW REVOLUTION

Villa's Foe to Head Formidable Movement.

El Paso, Tex., July 23.—General Pascual Orozco, commander of Federal irregulars and man of all men condemned to die by General Villa, is expected in northern Mexico within a short time, and upon his arrival a formidable counter revolution may take place.

Already the counter revolution is on in desultory fashion along the border. With Orozco's arrival it will receive the active backing of "cientificos," Spanish exiles and refugee Federalists, who have no idea of submitting to a Carranza government.

Orozco is somewhat in the position of a man without a country. Both he and Marcelino Caraveo are said to have offered their services to Provisional President Carranza to repel Carranza and his Constitutional troops, but their offers have been rejected.

The two men will get aid and assistance if they escape from central Mexico, where they are now operating, and can reach the vicinity of the United States border, for the Federal land owners in northern Mexico have realized that their only hope of saving their properties is to start a counter revolution, in the hope that this will bring about intervention by the United States.

Though they do not think that such a counter revolution would ever grow to such an extent as to become formidable, they are said to hope that it will sufficiently embarrass the Carranza administration and that the United States will be forced to intervene to establish anything like permanent peace.

It is said that between $50,000 and $75,000 has been obtained for the new movement and that quantities of arms and ammunition have been purchased. Men are being sent to points along the New Mexico-Chihuahua border each night in small bands and are being supplied with equipment after they cross the line.

MADDOO'S SON ARRESTED

Charged With Striking Policeman In Quarrel Over Motor Law.

Portsmouth, N. H., July 23.—A young man who says he is William G. McDoo, Jr., of New York, son of Secretary of the United States treasury, is under arrest here, charged with interfering with an officer.

Under arrest with young McDoo is Jesse Hoyt, of New York. The latter is charged with violating the Portsmouth automobile regulations.

The two young men were eating in a cafe on Hugh street. Patrolman O. W. Philbrick entered and ordered Hoyt to move to move his automobile. According to the policeman, Hoyt started to comply when McDoo rose from his seat and began a controversy and then struck Philbrick. Hoyt then took part in the scuffle. Both were arrested.

At the police station, according to the police, McDoo again struck the policeman, knocking off his helmet.

The KITCHEN CUPBOARD

COOKING CRABS.

A N easy way of serving crab meat in the shells is to shred it and mix it with a dressing made of four tablespoonfuls of oil, two teaspoonfuls of vinegar, salt and white pepper and cayenne. Return the dressed crab meat to the cleaned shells and garnish each with a thin slice of lemon cut in two pieces and two or three green sprigs of parsley.

Crab meat may be prepared in the same way heated, then returned to the shells and eaten hot.

Garnished With Parsley.

Broiled Crabs.—Boil the crabs and pick out the meat. Dice or shred and mix it with nutmeg, salt and pepper. Cut three ounces of butter in small pieces and add it to the crab meat. Then add three tablespoonfuls of vinegar and a quarter of a pound of fine breadcrumbs. Mix all these ingredients, fill the shells with the combination and put them on a hot broiler. Brown them quickly and serve immediately. Parsley and lemon may be used for garnish.

Tempting Luncheon Dish.

Crabs With Pimientos.—Boil hard four eggs, chop the whites, mash the yolks and mix them with two tablespoonfuls of fine white breadcrumbs and one and one-half tablespoonfuls of canned pimientos chopped fine. Melt, but do not brown, four tablespoonfuls of butter in the dish. Work in the egg mixture and add slowly a cupful of cream and, lastly, a cupful of crab meat. Season with salt, pepper, a teaspoonful of lemon juice and a dash of nutmeg. Let grow smooth and serve at once in little individual dishes or on toast.

Served In The Shells.

Sealed Crabs.—Boil and pick out the meat from the crabs. Beat an egg light and mix the meat of a dozen crabs. Season to taste with salt and cayenne and a little powdered mace or clove of garlic chopped very fine. Mix thoroughly into the crab meat some fine bread or cracker crumbs—enough to enable you to form the mixture into balls about the size of English walnuts. Dip these in beaten egg and roll in crumbs and fry in deep hot fat. Have the crabs shells cleaned and heated, put about four of the small balls in each shell with a sprig of parsley stuck in the topmost ball, pour a little cream sauce in the shell and serve very hot.

THE POULTRYMAN.

A hen is not lazy by nature and will surprise you in what she can do if given the right chance.

It costs but the merest trifle more to feed a hen that lays 150 eggs a year than one that lays sixty.

Keeping too many breeds is a poor way to succeed. One or two varieties given the best of care are preferable.

A poultryman who is too careless to keep the henhouse free from vermin does not deserve to succeed.

Poultry should be kept off feed twenty-four hours before being killed and dressed for market.

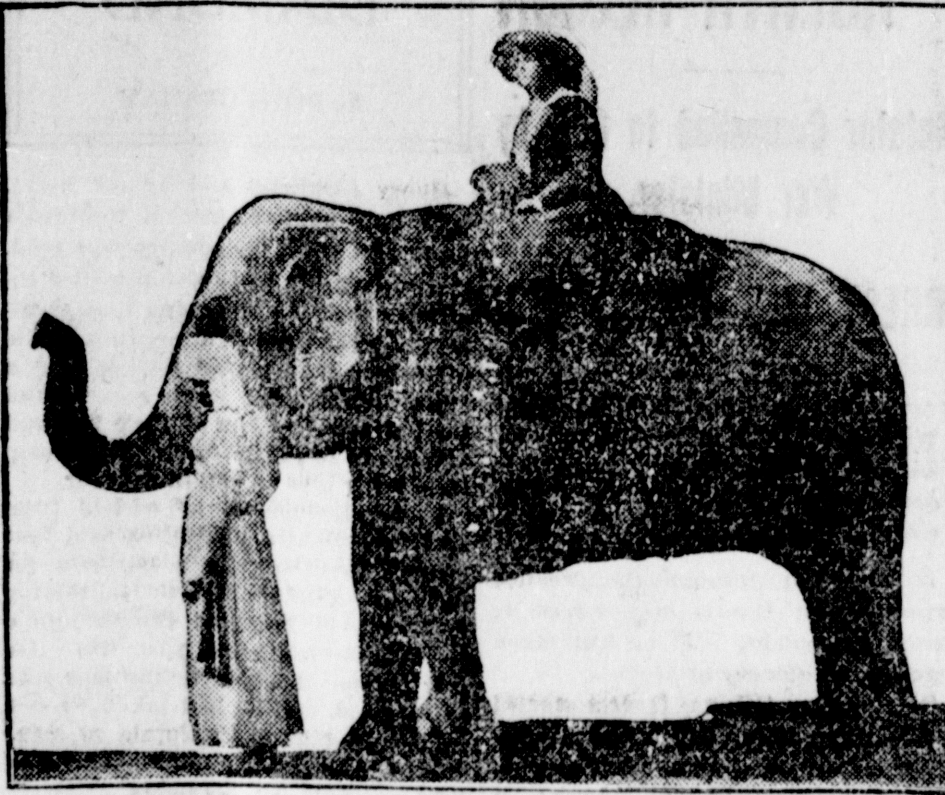

Have some way of telling the oldest eggs, then sell them.

Be sure to provide some shade in the runs, or it will be found that some of the chicks will not feather.

Chicks that have been drowned in watering tanks that some one forgot to empty would make a good sized flock.

Saved by Ocean Birds.

When the steamer Kensington left Java bound for Philadelphia some years ago with a cargo of sugar the weather was extremely hot, even for a tropical region. When five days out the ship passed through a vast area of seaweed, the home of millions of flies. Hardly had the vessel's prow touched the seaweed when the flies, attracted by the savory fumes of the cargo, began to swarm about the deck. They gathered in countless numbers, penetrated the wicker sugar bags and then attacked the crew, stinging the men about the face and hands. For five days the flies continued their onslaught, driving the men almost to desperation. Then there came an unexpected rescue. A flock of boat-swallow birds circled and wheeled above the steamer and then swooped down upon it. In one day the birds cleared the Kensington of the pests and then flew away.

SHOULD MARRIED MEN TANGO?

He danced, I say, right well. With emphasis, and also with good sense. He danced without theatrical pretense; Not a ballet master in the van of his drilled nymphs, but like a gentleman.

It is usually the young matron who is quickest to pick up a new fad. She who has a graceful form, is good to look upon, hailed the new dance with delight. The steady-going husband, who loved his pipe, his easy chair, slippers and paper after dinner, was coaxed and tempted into taking his wife to the places where the mad, merry tango was capturing and swaying the senses of the people.

The most sedate of men soon fall under the glamour of its spell. When the quiet husband looks round and sees staid old business acquaintances with lads and lasses grown, cavorting over the waxed floor somehow his toes fly tingle to try the tango himself—just for a lark. It doesn't take the average man long to pick up the step after he has looked and listened, practiced a bit on the sly.

There are always more young women than men. Dancing partners are a boon to the girls. He doesn't select the timid, reserved young creature for his first attempt, but rather the pretty girl with a great deal of assurance, who can put him through the paces.

The man soon gets the tango craze quite as severely as do his friends. He is apt to choose the same reluctant girl in whose step he has confidence.

The wife who found tango so irresistible gets quickly back to her senses, especially when she hears her neighbors' remark: "If he wasn't married 'twould be a match."

If a wife is a bit jealous in disposition, it does not appeal kindly to her to see her husband's arm round the slender waist of the girl six days in the week. She is the first one to cry down the tango, declaring it taboo in her home. She insists it's ugly, and that no man, especially the married man, should indulge in it—it makes him unappreciative of the society of his wife, especially if the latter has reached the fair, fat and forty mark, and cannot float about a ball-room like a fairy.

The man who learns to dance late in life always has a liking for it. It buoy's his spirits, limbers up his stiff feet, gives him pleasant thoughts to ruminate over.

A little nonsense now and then is relished by the wisest men.

An occasional dance might not wean hubby from the love and contentment of his fireside. But the wife who drags him hither and thither and sets the pace for the dancing shouldn't be surprised at the hold it gets on him in fascinating him.

Putting It Up to Father.

A local contributor cites a fresh example of the fashion in which the youth of today trips the unwary parent.

"Father," said the son home from college to his father, "I must have better rooms at college. Why, in the place I room now there isn't even hot water to shave with in the morning."

"Son, when I was your age I never had hot water to shave with. Did it when the weather wasn't too blooming cold out in front of the woodshed and made lather out of any old soap I could find."

"But, father," expostulated the son, "didn't you ever sent me to college that I might have the advantages you didn't have?"

BLANQUET MADE HUERTA RESIGN

Dictator Compelled to Quit by War Minister.

ARREST WAS THREATENED.

Huerta Was Drinking Hard When He Was Brought Up With Sharp Turn. General Blanquet First Man to Oppose Iron Hand Ruler Without Sacrificing Life or Liberty.

It was only through the greatest pressure that Huerta was forced to loosen the bulldog he had taken upon the presidency of Mexico.

On Saturday General Huerta started the drinking bout which ended only when he left the capital. It began immediately after the appointment of Francisco Carbajal as minister of foreign relations, according to information which has come from the capital. The dictator went to the Cafe Colon, where he drank until far into the night. The dictator spent the entire day Sunday drinking at the Cafes Chapultepec and El Globo.

Carbajal expected Huerta to resign Monday, but the dictator spent the day traveling from cafe to cafe in his automobile. Resignation was apparently far from his mind, and that evening Carbajal sent a note to Huerta, saying: "You promised to resign today. I believed you a man of your word. If you do not resign immediately and leave the capital I will do so."

Huerta's First Defiance.

It was the first time any one had opposed Huerta without sacrificing life or liberty. Huerta did not order that Carbajal be slain.

"My generals won't let me resign," was the dictator's excuse.

Carbajal then appealed to the man who has been closest to Huerta and whose word is law in the Mexican army. He went to General Blanquet and urged him to persuade Huerta to resign.

Blanquet believed Huerta should keep his word. Tuesday evening he found the dictator in one of the cafes. Huerta, he learned, had drunk and played his strongest card. He handed his own resignation to Huerta. "But you can't resign," Huerta thundered at his war minister. "This is not child's play, and you have a man's size job."

Blanquet Remains Firm.

Blanquet remained firm and insisted that both he and General Maure would resign if Huerta remained in the presidency. It is rumored that Blanquet even went further.

"I'll not only resign," Blanquet is rumored to have said, "but I will take the army with me, and my first order will be to place Victoriano Huerta under arrest."

Wednesday morning Blanquet again found Huerta. He resumed his threat to resign, take the army with him and arrest the dictator.

Huerta knew his adviser well enough to be certain he meant what he said. Half drunk, broken, Huerta signed his resignation.

CHINA GETS BEST STUDENT.

Much Formality Observed in Picking Candidate for the Customs Service.

Lester Knox Little, son of Postmaster John W. Little of Pawtucket, R. I., left for Shanghai to engage in the customs service of the Chinese republic under a seven year contract.

The post to which he has been appointed requires the services of a university graduate, and much formality was observed in selecting a candidate. In June Commissioner General Gilchrist of Chinese customs visited thirty colleges in search of suitable material. Each college was requested to name one American candidate. Dean Emery of Dartmouth named Mr. Little, who was to be graduated in June.

Of the thirty candidates presented twenty-four were quickly eliminated. The remaining six went through a stiff ordeal in which Little easily finished No. 1.

Little was graduated from the Pawtucket high school in 1910 with high honors. There he was a prominent football and track team man. At Dartmouth he won his letter on the track team. He is a member of Psi U, Casque and Gauntlet and Phi Beta Kappa.

MAIL BY AUTO TO FARMERS.

Uncle Sam Expects Carriers to Support Cars on $1,800 a Year.

The automobile will soon succeed the one horse shay on many rural routes throughout the United States. Under the terms of a bill ordered reported by the house postoffice committee an allowance of $1,800 a year will be authorized for rural carriers who use automobiles.

At present the standard rural route is twenty-four miles long and the maximum compensation $1,200 a year. On recommendation of the postmaster general the length of the routes will be increased to fifty miles, and officials believe that a yearly allowance of $1,800 will enable carriers on such routes to purchase and maintain automobiles of the cheaper type.

DIAMOND CUT DIAMOND

By RUTH GRAHAM

Henry Dickinson and Arthur Trent, both gold hunters, met in California years ago, when the country was wild, and after a life of hardship owned together a hole in the ground that promised to make them rich. Within a mile of them a man named Barker kept a store. Barker had some money, and the partners told him of their find and asked him to put in capital to develop it, offering him an eighth interest.

Barker learned all he wished from them about their mine, then said that mining was too risky a business for him; he wouldn't invest. In talking matters over Trent led Barker into a secret concerning his past life. He had become indebted in the east and so involved that he had taken French leave and gone to California to make a fresh start. If his mine panned out well he would pay his debts.

One day Trent went to Barker's store for some provisions and on the way back to his mine was kidnapped, taken to San Francisco and thence to Philadelphia. There his creditors, who had captured him, kept him in jail on various charges, because it had been reported to them that he had made money which he was concealing. But Trent finally convinced them that all he had in the world was an undeveloped mine in California. If they would give him a chance to develop it they would get their money. They freed him, and he succeeded in getting some capital from a relative. Then he returned to California after an absence of five months.

There he found his partner in jail charged with his (Trent's) murder. Dickinson was released at once, and the two held a conference. When their stories were put together it came out that Barker had laid out a plan to get possession of their mine. He wrote Trent's creditors that he had made money, and they arranged for his kidnapping, getting him away so secretly that no one knew what had become of him. Then Barker through paid stool pigeons manufactured evidence to show that Dickinson had murdered his partner.

The first impulse of the partners on seeing through a scheme by which both had suffered and Dickinson had been sentenced to be hanged was to punish Barker legally. But after a consultation they found that he had covered his tracks so adroitly that he would have every advantage. Besides, the law was not well administered, and even if they could convict Barker they would find it difficult to get him punished.

They therefore decided to fight him in the way he had fought them. Trent had brought money with him to develop the mine, but this they concealed from Barker. They pretended to be discouraged and begged Barker to visit their mine, see for himself what it was worth and invest on his own terms. They had no difficulty in convincing him of the mine's value, and after much bargaining he agreed to let them have $10,000 if they would cede to him an eighth interest.

They at once engaged a lawyer to draw up an agreement and submitted it to Barker. He was satisfied with it, and Dickinson copied it. Then all signed it, and one of the copies was delivered to Barker on payment of the money.

For a time after that the mine did well, but the partners soon told Barker that they must have more money. He grumbled, but agreed to give them $5,000 more for half their interest, making his own three-quarters. The transaction was completed, and Barker, who knew what the ore was paying, was well pleased. But the partners soon wanted more money and got it from Barker for half of their quarter interest, giving him all the mine except an eighth. The partners begged him not to be so hard on them, but he was relentless.

When the partners once more called on Barker for more money he denied them, but offered to buy their remaining eighth interest. They finally assented, but with great apparent reluctance. The money was paid and a bill of sale made out and signed by Dickinson and Trent, who were given a month to settle up their affairs and turn over the property.

The month passed, but the partners, instead of settling up their affairs, seemed to be developing the mine. On the thirtieth day Barker got out all the bills of sale they had given him and went to the mine to demand possession.

"We own this mine," said Dickinson, "and we propose to keep it."

"We'll see about that," was Barker's reply, and he opened his documents.

What was his surprise to see nothing but blank paper.

When the miners had laid their scheme to circumvent Barker, Trent, who before coming to California had been a manufacturer of ink, knew of a mixture that would look like ink, but would fade entirely out within a few days after being used on paper. Before making any papers for Barker he had gone to San Francisco and procured some of this ink, and every document given Barker had been written with it.

Barker, who was ruined, threatened criminal proceedings, but the partners had covered their tracks as well as he had covered his in his diabolical scheme to get their mine. Dickinson & Trent sold their property for $200,000 and a half interest. Trent paid his debts in full.
